Hoof trimming crate for sows – simple and gentle hoof care.

Regular hoof trimming is important for both animal welfare and production. When a sow stands and walks effortlessly, it will both eat and drink better promoting a high milk potential. A good hoof trimming crate makes the job easier, faster and safer – for both the sow and manual worker.

The PiggyTrim Hoof Care crate is built for systematic hoof trimming in sow herds. The sow walks in on its own, and the crate is then lifted hydraulically. When the sow is lifted like this it settles down and stays calm, so the work can be done at a comfortable height with free access to all four hooves.

The crate can be placed wherever it fits best in the barn. It's available with fittings for both solid and slatted floors. When lifted, there's plenty of space underneath for free passage, so it doesn't get in the way – even in narrow passages.

Hoof trimming in practice

Trimming usually takes around 5–10 minutes per sow and can be done with a one-hand angle grinder. Once hoof care becomes a regular part of herd management, the number of lame sows drops quickly. Healthy hooves make it easier for the sow to get up, move effortlessly and nurse the piglets – which improves both welfare and productivity.

- Gentle and calm for the sow
- Comfortable working height
- High ground clearance
- can be placed in walkways
- Simple two-button control
- Easy access to all hooves
